Local Market Overview

BIST - As November comes to an end. Yesterday was a low volume day as markets were closed for Thanksgiving. Share-based volatility was effective due to participation index changes. THYAO, PGSUS, CCOLA, SASA, CIMSA, GESAN, TABGD, CLEBI, which were announced to be removed from the participation index as of December 1, decoupled negatively. On the last trading day of the week, the US stock market will close early. In this respect, volumes may remain relatively low compared to previous weeks. On the other hand, as November comes to an end, the changing political climate in the US is a reason for decoupling in equity markets. MSCI World index gained 3.9% while MSCI Emerging Markets index declined 3.6%. MSCI Turkey index, where the expectation of a measured interest rate cut is effective in pricing, decouples positively with a monthly return of 8.3%. Istanbul Retail Prices data on December 1 and CPI data on December 3 will be followed for this expectation. In the short-term outlook, we had shared that we could see pressure towards 9,500 and 9,300 supports in the BIST-100 index if the 9,700-9,750 resistance level could not be exceeded. Yesterday, this pressure was felt with the effect of the change in the participation index. Despite our cautious optimism in the medium-long term, the volatile trend may continue on the day when the volume may remain relatively low in the short-term outlook. On a daily basis, 3Q24 GDP data and CBRT Financial Stability report will be followed.

BİST-100 (Day, ABD$)

VIOP Index30 – As November comes to an end, data will be influential on whether the rise will continue in the last month of the year or whether it will return to the 10,700 region... In December maturity Index30, while the intraday close was at 10,944, the evening session closed at 10,942. On the last trading day of the week due to Thanksgiving Day, US markets will have half-day trading today. There is no surprise new title in the MPC summaries. 3Q growth figures are announced today. Step by step, the expectation for November inflation is increasing. In the CBRT data, foreign investors completed last week with sellers in both equities and fixed income instruments. BIST30 December maturity continues to search for direction in the 10,900 region. As November comes to an end, data will be effective on whether the rise will continue in the last month of the year or whether it will return to the 10,700 region. Another topic is the minimum wage negotiations. The resistance level within the parallel band is at 11,150. The level of 12,100 in the 100g. average in the above region will be followed as another resistance level. The last trading day of the week can start horizontally-positive around 10,950. Let us remind you that 10,900-10,810 levels are support and 11,020-11,100 levels are resistance zones.

Spot USDTRY.. According to the minutes of the CBRT's November MPC meeting released yesterday, the level of the policy rate will be determined in a way to provide the tightness required by the disinflation process envisaged, taking into account inflation realizations and expectations. Therefore, monthly CPI data has become very critical in order to predict the extent of monetary easing in the coming months. The latest monthly inflation rate was 2.9%. However, in the presentation of the fourth inflation report of the year, the CBRT Governor announced that they expect CPI inflation slightly above 1.50% in November and December. According to market surveys, the median expectation for monthly CPI inflation in November is 2.00%. If the data to be announced is above this level, CBRT is likely to skip the interest rate cut in December or cut it by a very limited amount.
